

RIDER:

JENA ANTONUCCI was initially introduced into the hunter, jumper and equitation disciplines as a child. She would later be exposed to the back-side of New York Thoroughbred racing by her grandparents, avid New York owners. Jena spent many of her formative years retraining and developing off-the-track Thoroughbreds for their second careers. This experience motivated her to learn what is required to more effectively achieve this goal. She moved to Ocala, FL in 2000 and began breaking and training under the D. Wayne Lukas program at Padua Stables. Eventually the competitive nature of the business, along with the balance, artistry, athleticism and speed required in developing a great Thoroughbred motivated Jena to open her own business, Bella Inizio Farm, where she initially cared for broodmares, foals, weanlings and yearlings. Her experience and instinctive eye, coupled with her passion for training, culminated in her being fully focused on pursuing her training ambitions. Developing a unique set of horsemanship principles, Jena continued evolving into a top-notch trainer, fully committed to breaking and developing young horses, allowing the horse, through use of their own language, to develop to their highest potential. Jena took out her public license in early 2010, confident in her talents and her proven success in a farm setting, she quickly earned her first win on March 7, 2010 at Tampa Bay Downs. Building off this success, Jena confidently jumped into the deep waters of New York Racing and hasn't looked back since. Jena keeps an open door policy for owners as she continues to build a team and family environment which has been the foundation for this growth allowing her to maintain a string of horses in New York and Florida year-round. Jena joined the board of FL TRAC in November of 2016 and now serves as its Vice President. The organization has close to 180 retired Thoroughbreds with the focus on transitioning horses who were racing at Gulfstream to their next careers. Jena will wear the silks of her sponsor, The Stronach Group's Adena Springs Farm.
