

RIDER:

MAGGIE WOLFENDALE MORLEY can honestly state that Thoroughbred racing is her entire life. Her parents, Howard and Tammy, ran a training stable at Laurel Park and Maggie started riding at age two. “Before I could walk, I was in the tack room,” she has been quoted as saying.

Maggie grew up taking Thoroughbreds off the track and retraining them in different disciplines, as well as galloping horses in the morning. She earned both her assistant trainer and trainer licenses before deciding while in college to pursue communications and broadcasting within the industry. After graduation she worked for the Maryland Jockey Club and Colonial Downs before accepting the position with the New York Racing Association as their paddock analyst in 2010. Today you can find Maggie aboard her OTTB Yeager - her mount in the Real Rider Cup - on the MSG and FS2 broadcasts giving on-track analysis and post race interviews.

She and her husband, trainer Tom Morley, make their home in New York with their daughter Grace, who turns two this fall. The couple are very much looking forward to competing against each other on September 23! Maggie will wear the silks of her sponsor, West Point Thoroughbreds. Equine Advocates recently honored West Point Thoroughbreds' CEO and founder, Terry Finley, with the Safe Home Equine Protection Award at its annual Awards Dinner in Saratoga Springs, NY. Terry was recognized for making major contributions in the area of equine protection.
