

RIDER:

MEGAN JONES is the CEO and managing partner of Arnmore Thoroughbreds, LLC, sponsoring owner in the Real Rider Cup.

Megan was raised outside of horse racing and simply began following the sport with rabid interest on her own initiative in elementary school. She grew up with horses in rural South Carolina, riding before she could walk and competing on the East Coast in the hunters, jumpers and equitation through senior year of high school. Upon completing her Masters degree in Marketing from Clemson University at age 23, she moved to Kentucky and joined Team Valor International, where she worked as Director of Client Relations and in 2014 took the position as Vice President of the company. In 2012, Megan founded Valor Ladies, the first all ladies syndicate in the U.S. and continues to manage those horses under the stable Arnmore Thoroughbreds today. She has recently started the trucking company McLeod Materials and while at home learning the family trade still surrounds herself with Thoroughbreds coming off the track for retraining in her spare time as an amateur rider.
